Conditions of Access and Use

Copyright and Restrictions

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted materials. The various state privacy acts govern the use of materials that document private individuals, groups, and corporations. Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction if the document does not infringe the privacy rights of an individual, group, or corporation. These specified conditions of authorized use include non-commercial and non-profit study; scholarship; or research; or teaching, criticism; commentary; or news reporting, as a NPS preservation or security copy, and as a research copy for deposit in another institution.

If a user later uses a copy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," the user may be personally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement. This institution's permission to obtain a photographic, xerographic, digital, or other copy of a document doesn't indicate permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, sell, distribute, or prepare derivative works from this document without first obtaining permission from the copyright holder and from any private individual, group, or corporation shown or otherwise recorded.

Permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, prepare derivative works from, sell, or otherwise distribute the item must be obtained by the user separately in writing from the holder of the original copyright (or if the creator is dead from his/her heirs) as well as from any individual(s), groups, or corporations whose name, image, recorded words, or private information (e.g., employment information) may be reproduced in the source material. The holder of the original copyright isn't necessarily the National Park Service. The National Park Service is not legally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement when materials are wrongfully used after being provided to researchers for "fair use."

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order if fulfillment of the order is judged in violation of copyright or federal or state privacy or publicity law.

Conditions Governing Access

Items containing sensitive or personally identifiable information may be restricted at the discretion of the curator. Technical limitations may prevent access to obsolete media formats.

Rights Statement for Archival Description

Pursuant to 17 U.S.C. § 105, copyright protection under this title is not available for any work of the United States Government, but the United States Government is not precluded from receiving and holding copyrights transferred to it by assignment, bequest, or otherwise.

History

James Everett Deacon, also known as Jim Deacon, was born May 18, 1934 in White, South Dakota, and died in his Nevada home on February 23, 2015. Deacon is known for his conservation work with endangered desert fishes, particularly the Devils Hole pupfish.

Deacon earned a B.S. from Midwestern University and a Ph.D. from the University of Kansas, Lawrence in 1960. He began working as an assistant professor of biology at the University of Nevada Las Vegas in 1960. He became an associate professor of biology in 1965 and a professor of biology in 1968. He retired from the University of Nevada Las Vegas in 2002.

Deacon was a founding member of the Desert Fishes Council, an organization with a mission to “preserve the biological integrity or desert aquatic ecosystems and their associated lifeforms,” and served as the chair of the organization from 1975-1977. Deacon served on the Devils Hole Pupfish Recovery Team from 1978-1982 and the Warm Springs Pupfish Recovery Team from 1975-1980.
