Statement on Archival Language:

The David Allan Hubbard Library aims to describe archival materials in a way that is respectful to all communities who use, create, and are represented in our collections. However, the nature of historical materials is such that some material may represent positions, language, values, and stereotypes that are not consistent with the current values and practices at Fuller Theological Seminary.

Within our finding aids, it is possible users may encounter language that is offensive or harmful. While some language included in finding aids was written by staff, other language originates from the people and organizations that created the material. For example, folder titles are often preserved from the creators. It is standard practice not to change them and, in some cases, it provides important context about the materials. When we find problematic language created by archivists and staff we strive to update it. When we find problematic language from the original creator we will transcribe as is to preserve the context of its creation.

Biographical History

Jack and Anna Kerr were longtime members of the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood in California. Jack A. (John) Kerr (February 3, 1922 – November 15, 2015) served many years as a professor at the University of Southern California and as a Deacon, Elder, and Missions department volunteer within his church. He also preached monthly at the Los Angeles Union Rescue Mission for thirty years.

Jack's father, Arthur Neal Kerr, discovered butane and propane; and started the liquified petroleum business, Imperial Gas. Jack's family moved from Pittsburgh, PA to Long Beach, CA in 1925 and then to Hancock Park c. 1936. Pastor Inwood of the Long Beach Methodist Church recommended they attend the church of a friend, Stuart MacLennan, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood. The Kerr family agreed and transitioned to the new church.

When Louis Evans became the new pastor at First Presbyterian Church, the Evans family moved into the Kerrs' neighborhood. According to the Kerrs, Jack was a favorite of Mother Evans, Pastor Evan's mother. Her habit to preach on street corners influenced Jack to pursue ministry work within Los Angeles' Skid Row.

Anna Kerr (June 12, 1928 – December 1, 2020) and her family moved from Texas to Los Angeles, CA during the United States' Great Depression (1929-1941). The 1933 earthquake created jobs enabling her father, Clinton Linus August Borkemohle, to find employment as a civil, architectural, and structural engineer. Borkemohle contributed to building the Los Angeles Union Passenger Terminal (called the Union Station), the original Disney Studios in Burbank, CA; and cantilever hangars at both Los Angeles and New York airports.

The Borkemohle family was part of Presbyterian congregations in Amarillo, TX; Long Beach, CA; Huntington Park, CA; and Coronado, CA. Anna's father, brother, and numerous cousins served as elders. Anna began teaching as a Kindergarten class Sunday school teacher when she was in the 7th grade. By the time she finished high school, she had taught 5th and 6th graders as well. When Anna was a teenager, she began attending the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood's college department class. She traveled each Sunday morning by bus, usually arriving too late to get a seat inside. She listened to Henrietta Mears from the courtyard and was struck by her message as well as by her manner.

When the Kerrs married, they attended First Presbyterian Church together and began to develop their ministry skills there. In 1961, they participated in the Tokyo Christian Crusade in Japan. Dick Halverson, Bill and Vonette Bright, and six men from their Sunday School class also participated, inviting many locals to go to the crusade each night. Bob Pierce spoke, accompanied by a translator. The crusade included a 500 voice choir and a 200 piece orchestra. Converts included an industrialist named Mr. Shimamura, and Bob Matsuo.

Jack wrote plays for the First Presbyterian Church congregation, served as a Deacon, then an Elder, and was on the pastoral search team which found Lloyd Ogilvie. Anna developed longstanding relationships with women prayer partners, served as a Deacon and an Elder, and took over the Missions department in 1994. As of 2012, Anna led the Women's Ministry, organizing an annual conference called Faithlift.

The Kerrs helped organize short term mission groups for many years. They went to Ecuador to photograph the work of Dr. Dilworth, a medical missionary among the Quichua Indians in 1956, shortly after the Aucas people killed five missionaries. The Kerrs made a project of showing slides and speaking to various churches and civic groups to raise funds to build and furnish a hospital. Anna helped revise Dr. Dilworth's Masters thesis for the Fuller Seminary School of World Mission (supervisor Dr. McGavran). In 1996, 1998, and 2003, they were part of groups which served at Embangweni Hospital in Malawi, under the auspices of Medical Benevolence Foundation.

Scope and Content
