Biographical Note:

Albert Frey, FAIA, was born 1903 in Switzerland, and earned his architecture diploma there in 1924. He moved to Paris in 1928 to work for Le Corbusier, on projects including the Villa Savoye.

Moving to New York in 1930, Frey was the first Corbusier disciple to work in the U.S. There, he became partners with architect A. Lawrence Kocher, who was also managing editor of Architectural Record magazine. Together they published numerous articles on urban planning, the modernist aesthetic, and technology. Kocher and Frey also designed four buildings, including the acclaimed Aluminaire House, a demonstration house designed for the Exhibition of the Architectural League in New York, 1931.

In 1934, Frey came to Palm Springs to supervise construction of the Kocher-Samson Building, a mixed-use building for his partner's brother, J.J. Kocher. Frey fell in love with the area and worked with John Porter Clark for two years under the offices of Van Pelt and Lind as neither architect was yet licensed in California.

Returning to New York in 1937 to work on the Museum of Modern Art, Frey moved back to Palm Springs permanently two years later. Rejoining Clark in a partnership, Frey went on to design a body of work including residential, commercial, institutional and civic buildings. Many of these buildings are preserved today including Raymond Loewy House (1946-47), Palm Springs City Hall (1952), Palm Springs Aerial Tramway Valley Station (1963) and Frey House II (1963-64) and the most recently restored North Shore Yacht Club at the Salton Sea (1958).

Frey lived in Palm Springs until his death in 1998. As Palm Springs' first full-time, resident architect, Frey is known as one of the founders of Desert Modernism.

Scope and Content Note:

Upon his death Albert Frey donated to the Palm Springs Art Museum his second residence in Palm Springs, 686 Palisades Drive (Frey House II), and the contents of the residence. The Albert Frey Collection (55-1999.2) was acquired in 1999 at the bequest of Albert Frey. Materials came from the Frey property. In 2020, the Jean Farrar Collection (S2020.1) was donated and added to the Frey archive in January 2022. The collection contains drawings, slides, negatives, photographs, photo albums, scrapbooks, books, magazines, codes, standards, professional association materials, artifacts and vendor samples and catalogs, correspondence, and household items.

As with many collections of this kind the contents of the manuscript folders had mostly been arranged into groupings by the donor for his own use. This original order simplified the arrangement of the collection into standard archival series and allowed the maintenance of Frey's filing methods. Besides the organized files there was a quantity of material filed without any discernable organization. These materials were organized into Series IV and V with a differentiation into purely personal materials and materials concerned with the profession of architect.

After being arranged intellectually the manuscript materials were transferred into acid-free folders with the photographic materials transferred into the appropriate acid-free sleeves.

The collection is organized into 16 series each of which is described below:

Series I: Correspondence - Active

Each folder in this collection was assigned a locator number to assist in file retrieval. This assigned location includes a capital roman numeral for the series, a capital letter for the box or drawer, and a folder number within the box or drawer. Folder descriptions include dates of included materials when available. Most folders also include undated materials.

Due to Frey's filing methods an Index to Architectural Projects has been provided at the end of the inventory to assist researchers in retrieving all files relevant to specific projects.

Series Description

Series I: Correspondence - Active

The Active Correspondence Series was originally alphabetically filed without many individual folders. The loose contents of this file were sorted into folders often containing several letters of the alphabet. The larger files were mostly correspondence and other materials dealing with individual architectural projects.

Series II: Correspondence – Inactive

The Inactive Correspondence Series generally consists of correspondence and other materials dealing with individual architectural projects.

Series III: Finances - CONFIDENTIAL

The Finances Series consist of a variety of materials dealing with Albert Frey's everyday financial life and includes cancelled checks, bank account statements, individual income tax statements, bank passbooks, paid bills, and medical bills. The series also includes a few partnership income tax returns within the period 1949-1971 and some ledger materials delineating employees and their payroll information. Most financial information dealing with architectural projects will be found in Series VI.

Series IV: Personal Files, Miscellaneous

This series contains materials concerning Frey's life outside of his work and interests as an architect. This includes his family, marriage and divorce, engagements and telephone calls, naturalization and passports, etc.

Series V: Architectural Files, Miscellaneous

The Architectural Files series groups together all of the materials which deal with Frey and his architectural work and concerns which were not directly related to specific projects. It includes architectural supply catalogs, articles and books about Frey, the Frey and Chambers partnership, and a scrapbook whose contents delineate Frey's life as an architect.

Series VI: Architectural Projects

The project files are mostly arranged by project and individual names and include a variety of materials. Blueprints and photographs had been removed and refilled in the appropriate series. Most of the project files deal with the design and construction of residences for individuals. This series also includes separate files of forms useful in architectural projects, project billing statements and time sheets, and information concerning projects deemed significant or of architectural interest.

Series VII: Personal and Architectural Photographs

This series contains photographic materials originally grouped together by Frey and other photographs which were found scattered throughout other files in the collection. The first group of materials is photographic albums which were assigned a number for organizational purposes. These include family and travel materials and many views of the desert shot by Frey. Where possible photographs were removed from the original loose-leaf binders and placed in acid-free sleeves for purposes of preservation. Some of the color photographs were probably sent to Frey by other individuals who had visited him or were showing their own houses. There are several photographers represented in the collection. Among the most prolific is Julius Shulman. Gayle's Studio was also used generally for drawings, sketches, and models. Other photographs may be found in the scrapbook which is filed as part of Series V. Most photographs in this series are undescribed and undated.

Series VIII: Blueprints, Drawings, and Maps

This series consists of oversize, mostly architectural project, materials generally stored in flat blueprint files. Some of the blueprints were prepared by other architects as noted.

Index to Architectural Projects

Because Frey filed architectural project files within many of the individual series as well as within Series VI: Architectural Projects an Index to Architectural Projects was created to simplify researcher's use of the collection. The index is organized by project/personal name and includes some projects for which Frey was not the original architect. Most of the project files deal with the design and construction of residences for individuals.

Series XV: The Jean Farrar Collection – S2020.1

The collection complements the art museum's existing Albert Frey Archive with the majority of source materials from Frey's private collection. Jean Farrar, with the approval of Frey, planned on publishing a book documenting his life and career. The collection is designated as Series XV and contains 5 banker boxes and a Yoga Headstand Stool.

Source research materials used during the manuscript development of Albert Frey: Pioneer Modern Architect by Jean Farrar, copyright 2000. Materials were originally stored in binders or folders within plastic sleeves. Items were removed from storage holders and rehoused in acid-free folders and storage boxes. The collection is a mix of original photographs, photo album leaves, correspondence, newspaper and magazine clippings, greeting cards, postcards, and ephemera including photocopies, reproductions of photographs, and draft text of manuscript and chapters.

Photographers include Albert Frey (Album Leaves), Julius Shulman (JS), Gayle Studios (GS), Stephen Willard (SW), Paul Pospesil (PP), and others. Photographers are identified by name or by initials and include project and print number when available.

NOTE: Due to the number of duplicate items, descriptive terms were applied when first encountered and may not necessarily be repeated in subsequent entries. In situations where multiple copies are present, the best copies were retained.
