Materials of Harry R. Haldeman
Among the Nixon Presidential Materials, 1969-73

The Presidential Historical materials of Harry R. Haldeman, Assistant to the President, are in the custody of the National Archives and Records Administration, under the provisions of Title I of the Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-526, 88 Stat. 1695).

In accordance with the Act and regulations implementing the Act, archivists reviewed the file group to identify personal and private materials and nonhistorical items. These items have been returned to H. R. Haldeman.

Materials covered by the Act have been archivally processed and are described in this register. Items that are security classified or otherwise restricted under the Act and regulations have been removed and placed in a closed file. A Document Withdrawal Record (GSA Form 7279) with a description of each restricted document has been inserted at the beginning of each folder from which materials have been removed. A Document Control Record marks the original position of the withdrawn item. Employees of the National Archives will review periodically the unclassified portions of closed materials for the purpose of opening those which no longer require restriction. Certain classified documents may be declassified under authority of Executive Order 12065 in response to a Mandatory Review Request (GSA Form 7277) submitted by the researcher.

Special Files Materials Scope and Content Notes

The files reflect Harry Robbins (H. R.) Haldeman's role as President Richard M. Nixon's chief administrative assistant and chief of staff for the period January 21, 1969 through May 19, 1973.

However, Haldeman's official title was Assistant to the President. Haldeman acted as staff manager, timekeeper and communications director. Haldeman also directed the activities of the President's Appointments Secretary and the White House Staff Secretary. In these roles Haldeman worked directly with the President in planning President Nixon's daily schedule, provided the President with information he requested from the members of his staff and the members of his administration, and relayed instructions from the President to other White House offices and members of the Executive branch of the Government. Haldeman was the first to see the President officially in the morning and the last to see him at night. With a few exceptions, Haldeman controlled who saw the President and what the President read. Haldeman received copies of memorandums and letters written by senior staff members and assistants. Haldeman had no independent schedule. His schedule was that of the President.

The file group is arranged in eight series: *

H.R. Haldeman Personal Files (1968-1973)

Alpha Name Files (1969-1973)

Alpha Subject Files (1969-1973)

Chron[ological] Files (1969-1973)

Larry Higby Files (1969-1973)

1960 Campaign Files **

1962 Campaign Files **

1972 Presidential Election Campaign Files

The types of records found in these series include original incoming letters and memoranda, transmittal letters and staff memoranda for correspondence, reports, telegrams, cables and teletype messages, printed materials, brochures and magazine reprints, preservation copies of newspaper and magazine clippings, cross reference sheets to other file materials, withdrawal sheets for materials either transferred as audio-visual or museum items and restricted for national security or privacy reasons.

This scope and content note does not describe all of the materials of H.R. Haldeman. As other groups of his material are processed and described, the results finding aids will be attached.

* See subsequent Series= Descriptions

 These series fall outside of the Presidential Materials date coverage and are considered Haldeman's personal property and were returned to him.

H. R. Haldeman's Staff

Although Haldeman's area of responsibility covered most of the White House, he had only three aides in his personal office: Lawrence M. (Larry) Higby, his administrative assistant, Gordon Strachan, and Bruce Kehrli, staff assistants. They were primarily concerned with following up Haldeman's directives to see that deadlines were met, to assure that background material on particular meetings went to the President, to arrange Haldeman's schedule and to take care of other "housekeeping duties". Three secretaries were also assigned to this staff.

Other White House aides also worked within Haldeman's purview. They were Dwight L. Chapin, Ron Walker, Mark Goode, David Parker, Alexander P. Butterfield, Jon Meade Huntsman, Stephen Bull and William E. Timmons.

During the reelections campaign, the President's campaign organization reported to Haldeman.

Appendix B

The following White House employees and other agents of the President reported to Haldeman:

Lawrence M. Higby was Haldeman=s personal aide and his chief administrative assistant throughout Haldeman=s tenure at the White House. He had worked previously for Haldeman in private business and in the 1968 Presidential campaign. Higby supervised the flow of persons, papers, telephone calls, and correspondence to Haldeman, acted in Haldeman=s name, and traveled with him. After Haldeman=s resignation, Higby transferred to the Office of Management and Budget.

Gordon Strachan became Haldeman=s principal political assistant in March 1971, after working for Herbert Klein, then Director of Communications for the Executive Branch. Strachan performed political assignments for Haldeman. He supervised the White House polling operation and reported on the activities of the Republican National Committee, and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President (CRP). He regularly prepared political matters memoranda for Haldeman on the status of the 1972 election campaign, and often carried out decisions Haldeman made on the basis of the information they contained. After the 1972 election, Strachan was appointed as general counsel of the U.S. Information Agency.

Alexander P. Butterfield was appointed deputy assistant to the President in January 1969. Beginning in January 1970, Butterfield=s office adjoined the President=s. He had responsibility for the President=s daily schedule. He oversaw the administration of the White House, including the off ice of the staff secretary. He reported directly to Haldeman and functioned as Haldeman=s deputy in handling the actual flow of people and papers in and out of the President=s office. In March 1973, Butterfield was appointed Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Dwight L. Chapin had known Haldeman previously and had worked for the President at his law firm for two years before the 1968 election. In January 1969, Chapin joined the White House staff as a special assistant to the President and acted as the President=s appointments secretary. Chapin had general planning responsibility for the President=s schedule and travel. He reported directly to Haldeman and at times, to the President. Two years later, Chapin was appointed deputy assistant to the President. He left the White House and entered private business in February 1973.

Stephen B. Bull joined the White House staff in January 1969 and worked under Chapin in the scheduling office. In February 1973, he was appointed as Special Assistant to the President and assumed additional responsibilities for implementing the President=s daily schedule.

Hugh W. Sloan, Jr. became a staff assistant to the President on January 20, 1969. He worked under Chapin on the planning of the President=s appointments and travel. He was also assigned certain special projects. Sloan left the White House in March 1971 to join the President=s re-election campaign organization. He resigned as the treasurer of the Finance Committee to Re-Elect the President (FCRP) on July 11, 1972.

John W. Dean was hired by Haldeman in July 1970, as counsel to the President. Dean had previously been an Associate Deputy Attorney General in the Justice Department. His duties in the White House included working with the Justice Department. The counsel's office advised the President on technical legal problems and prepared legal opinions on issues. Dean was also assigned by Haldeman to gather information on political matters of interest to the White House. Dean normally reported to Haldeman, but on certain domestic matters he reported to Ehrlichman. Dean resigned on April 30, 1973.

Fred Fielding, in October 1970, was hired as assistant counsel to the President. He became associate counsel in the Spring 1971. He was Dean's principal deputy. Fielding was appointed deputy counsel early in 1973, and resigned from the President's staff on January 11, 1974.

Herbert G. Klein was appointed in January 1969, to the newly created position of Director of Communications for the Executive Branch. His office handled many of the White House public relations and media activities. He and his assistants in the office of communications reported to Haldeman. Klein resigned from the White House on July 1, 1973.

Jeb Stuart Magruder was appointed on October 7, 1969, as special assistant to the President to work on Haldeman's staff. Later in 1969, Magruder was also named Deputy Director of Communications. He held both positions until he resigned in May, 1971, to work in the President's re-election campaign organization; he later became deputy campaign director of CRP. Magruder's responsibility at the White House was public relations. He organized letter writing programs, encouraged media coverage, and formed private committees to support administration positions.

Herbert L. Porter came to the White House in December 1970, with the understanding that he would work in the re-election campaign. After doing advance work for about a month, Porter was offered a job by Magruder on Klein's staff. From January until May, 1971, he worked as a staff assistant in the communications office, where he did public relations work, including scheduling speakers. Porter assumed scheduling responsibilities for the predecessor organization of CRP in May, 1971.

Charles W. Colson was named special counsel to the President on November 6, 1969. Colson initiated, planned, and executed many White House public relations and media efforts. He was in charge of White House relations with special interest groups and coordinated fundraising for administration projects. Colson also organized political support for the President's policies. Generally, he reported to Haldeman, but he reported directly to the President on certain matters. On March 10, 1973, Colson resigned from the White House.

Frederick C. Larue was appointed a special consultant to the President in September 1969. He served without pay. Larue reported to Haldeman on the political projects he undertook for the White House. He resigned on February 15, 1972, to work in the President's re-election campaign and later became special assistant to CRP's campaign director.

Herbert Kalmbach became the President's personal attorney in 1969. He had worked on President Nixon's 1962 campaign for Governor of California and had been associate finance chairman of the President's 1968 campaign. Kalmbach undertook various fundraising assignments on behalf of the President from 1969 through 1972. Kalmbach was not employed by the White House, although he acted at Haldeman's direction.

John D. Ehrlichman was appointed counsel to the President in January 1969. He reported primarily to Haldeman. On November 4, 1969, he became assistant to the President for Domestic Affairs and the President's chief assistant in the White House for all domestic matters. He advised the President on policy and communicated Presidential decisions to departments and agencies. On July 1, 1970, the Domestic Council was established in the Executive Office of the President as a separate entity with its own staff and budget. Ehrlichman was appointed Executive Director. On January 29, 1973, Ehrlichman resigned this position and on January 21 joined Haldeman as one of the four principal assistants to the President. He worked in that capacity until May 19, 1973. On April 30, 1973, the President announced Ehrlichman's resignation from the White House.
