1989-187-12		Brochure			5/1/1965	1965	1965	Superior Court Building County of Santa Clara	Brochure introducing the new Santa Clara County Superior Court Building, with invitation to dedication on May 1, 1965, at 190 North Market Street, San Jose. Includes drawings or images of all courthouses that have stood downtown, with a brief history: "A courthouse first stood in Santa clara County in 1798, 167 years ago, when the Mexicans built the Juzgado on Market Street...when California joined the Union, new court facilities were set up on First Street in 1850, then on Santa Clara Street in 1851, again on Market Street until 1853... Fire forced a brief stay on Lightston Alley before the move to the What Cheer House on Second Street, which became the first courthouse owned by the County. Seven years later in 1860, the Courts moved again, this time into the City Hall for three years, then later into rented quarters on Market Street. The great day finally arrived in 1868 when the Courts occupied the beautiful neo-classic building still in use today on North First Street... Now another great day has come for the Courts of Santa Clara County, with the dedication of a new five-story Superior Court Building located on Market Street..."

1989-187-44	Series	Drawing, Architectural	Wyckoff, Ralph		//	1941	1952	Anglo Bank Building/Anglo-California National Bank (101 West Santa Clara Street)	Original line drawings on tissue, and full set of blueprints, for Jobs 803 and 968 for a building for the Anglo Californian National Bank (or Anglo Bank Building) at 101 West Santa Clara Street, San Jose, including proposed additions in 1952. The Anglo-California National Bank bought the building on the corner of Santa Clara and Market Streets (previously known as the Rea Building) and demolished it in 1941. Wyckoff designed a two-story concrete building built in its place, later the headquarters of the San Jose National Bank. In 2001, the San Jose City Council initiated proceedings to designate the building as a historic landmark. The Historic Landmarks Commission voted unanimously to recommend it be designed as a City Landmark, noting it retains a high level of integrity with the Wyckoff design and is a significant implementation of late Art Deco architecture.	5 folders	Wyckoff, Ralph

1989-187-72		Drawing, Architectural	Wyckoff, Ralph		/ /	1941	1950	Abraham Lincoln High School Architectural Drawings and Plans	Opening its doors in 1942 to approximately 600 students, San Jose's Abraham Lincoln High School was a successful addition to the educational system of the city. Located at 555 Dana Avenue and designed by noted architectural firm Binder & Curtis, the modern school boasted terrazzo floors and, by 1947, a swimming pool. According to the San Jose News from January 12, 1942, the name was a fitting one as it recalled "other days in American history which were just as dark and foreboding as the [years leading up to WWII] and through which we came safely." In 1947, the school expanded to include a new gymnasium, female and male locker rooms and a swimming pool. The new gymnasium complex was designed by established local architects Ralph Wyckoff, E.W. Kress and Peter G. Wuss working for the architectural firm of Binder & Curtis. Wyckoff designed and worked on numerous school buildings in the bay area including the Speech and Drama Building for San Jose State, Sacred Heart Elementary School in Saratoga and the Los Gatos Grammar School. The collection contains original blueprints and pencil drawings of the Abraham Lincoln High School complex including floor plans, elevations, electrical/mechanical plans, presentation drawings and concept sketches.	6 Folders	Wyckoff, Ralph

1989-187-111	Series	Drawing, Architectural				1906	1950	Hall of Justice (St. James Square)	Series of plans for the original Hall of Justice on St. James Square, in San Jose, as well as renovations and remodels dating to 1950. The sandstone building was on the southeast corner of Market Street and St. James Street. It was badly damaged in 1906 earthquake just before it was scheduled to open, and was rebuilt and opened in 1908. The Hall of Justice originally housed the municipal court, as well as county offices. It was demolished in 1962 and replaced with the Santa Clara County Superior Court Building. Charles McKenzie was a consulting architect on the Hall of Justice. In 1931, St. James Square was favored as the site of a new Civic Center in San Jose, with plans for new cultural and administrative buildings, but the plans did not come to fruition. 1989-187-113	Series	Drawing, Architectural	Wyckoff, Ralph	Wuss, Peter G.		1940	1974	Farmers Union Architectural Drawings and Plans	The Farmers Union Corporation was established in 1874 and served as an agricultural cooperative and bank, selling groceries, produce, hardware and agricultural equipment. Control of the cooperation was consolidated in the early 1900s by John P. McEnery and Robert F. Benson. Originally located on the northwest corner of West Santa Clara and North San Pedro (151 West Santa Clara), the Farmers' Union expanded to acquire 23-25 North San Pedro as a feed mill in the 1880s, 20 North Almaden by 1891, then 161 and 169-177 West Santa Clara by 1940 and 1955 respectively. Between 1940 and 1974, the original building and surrounding structures underwent renovation led by architects Ralph Wyckoff and Peter G. Wuss. After 1960, mercantile operations ceased and the Farmer's Union complex shifted its focus to restaurant and office uses. The building was renovated again in the 2010s before becoming a restaurant. The collection contains original and copied drawings and plans of the Farmers Union Building, located at 151 W. Santa Clara St. in San Jose's historic San Pedro Square. Material was produced by both Ralph Wyckoff and Peter G. Wuss, with Wuss taking over the project after Wyckoff's death in 1956. This includes drawings, elevations, floor plans, additions, alterations and revised plans. The information provided above primarily comes from a "Historic Resources Technical Report" of 20 North Almaden Avenue which was prepared by Daniel David Shoup in December, 2014.	3 folders

1989-187-114	Series	Drawing, Architectural	Wyckoff, Ralph		//	1922	1934	U.S. Post Office, St. James Square (105 North First Street, San Jose)	Includes several original blueprints by William Binder circa 1914, as well as U.S. Treasury blueprints from the 1920s for an addition or remodel of the original 1892 post office on Market Street (now the San Jose Museum of Art). Plans for the new post office on St. James Square include shop drawing bluprints for third-party contractors, Treasury Department standard mechanical drawings, Wyckoff's full scale model blueprints for architectural elements, line drawings on tissue, cornerstone design, and full set of elevations and floor plans. The [former] San Jose main post office was a WPA project, located on St. James Square. It was built to replace the Market Street post office. Wyckoff travelled to Washington, D.C. to get his plans approved. Now listed on the National Register of Historic Places, it was built in Spanish Colonial style with lavish use of terra cotta facing and ornamentation and red tile roof, and completed in 1933.	8 map folders, two oversize rolled tubes	Wyckoff, Ralph

									From the San Jose State University Department of Television, Radio, Film and Theatre's website: "During the post-war boom years of 1952-1954, the new Speech and Drama Building (now Hugh Gillis Hall) was planned and built [by Ralph Wyckoff] at the juncture of 5th and San Fernando Street. Prior to that time the department had operated out of the Little Theatre located as one of the connected buildings of the College quadrangle. As the department grew, the scene shop, costume shop and several faculty offices were set up in Quonset huts acquired after World War II. They were located outside the building and behind Morris Dailey Auditorium. From 1941 onward, Hugh Gillis was the driving force behind the construction of the new Speech and Drama Building at Fifth and San Fernando streets. It was completed in 1953 and dedicated in 1954, with a total area of 50,422 square feet at a cost of $1,284,866. Of particular importance in the new building were radio and television studios. The 1953 building was a single story structure; the second floor was added afterwards. In 1982 the Speech and Drama Building was re-dedicated and named in his honor, Hugh Gillis Hall. Construction progress on the new building had not been without its difficulties, including a work stoppage following a breakdown of negotiations between the Association of General Contractors of Northern California and the AFL laborers' union. Four thousand laborers throughout the county were involved in the shutdowns. Negotiations broke down, according to the contractors association, over union demands for a 15-cent an hour increase. The contractors offered a 10-cent an hour pay raise. Another problem arose when Wendell Johnson, the department Scene Designer, returned from a sabbatical leave and toured the new theatre prior to the dedication of the building and discovered a serious structural omission. The stage house had a grid to support the weight of scenery and lighting equipment that would be suspended from it. He pointed out, however, that the "strong-back," two integral and major I-beams, had been omitted during the construction phase. The strong-back was the location for the head-block pulleys to which all the cables from the pulleys located through-out the grid system were gathered to be controlled by a counter-weight "fly system" for raising and lowering scenery and lighting equipment

(Woodland Avenue, San Jose), November 9, 1966. Note: Wall Street appears to be renamed Beach Street as of catalog date. According to a Watsonville Register-Pajaronian article dated January 7, 1964, Wuss prepared sketches as part of an effort to overhaul some of Watsonville's older downtown buildings, including the Stoesser properties on Main Street's 300 block, and buildings on Wall Street from Ford Alley to Van Ness Avenue including the State Theater and the Appleton Hotel. George Menasco of Charles Ford Co., which purchased the Wall Street structures is quoted as saying the face-lifts would definitely take place within two years. Menasco said the store was considering turning the State Theater building into a warehouse and repair shops, tearing down the buildings behind Ford's and expanding the parking area. The Stoesser block and annex (331-341 Main Street) were later added to the National Register of Historic Places, but were heavily damaged and lost in the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake.	1 folder	Wyckoff, Ralph
