Abstract

The San Diego and Coronado Ferry Company (SDCF), a subsidiary of the Coronado Beach Company, was started by H.L. Story and Elijah S. Babcock in April of 1886. The ferry provided service for pedestrians and vehicles from San Diego to North Island and Coronado. The company's initial role was to transport workers building the Hotel del Coronado and to promote the development of the island as a health resort and spa. John D. Spreckels eventually took over ownership of the company.

Spreckels sold the Coronado Ferry Company, along with the San Diego Electric Railway Company, to Jesse Haugh in 1948. Haugh changed the name of the San Diego Electric Railway to the San Diego Transit Company. The companies were purchased by the City of San Diego in 1967. Ferry service was terminated on August 2, 1969 at 11:59 p.m., one minute before the opening of the Coronado Bridge.

Scope and Content

The SDCF Collection includes, but is not limited to, business papers, financial reports, contracts, work orders, and correspondence relating to the SDCF.
